Sun Learning Services Mobile Learning

Friday, 30 May 2008
Last Updated Saturday, 31 May 2008

This week I had the opportunity to talk with Sun Microsystem's CTO of Sun Learning Services. He posted a video on You Tube this week of their Mobile Learning initiative using the iPhone and iPod Touch. (See below for video)

Training videos are available "just in time, just the right size and exactly what they are looking for." For those without WiFi connectivity content can be preloaded using RSS feeds through iTunes. Corporate security is enforced in the background, only allowing access to those authorized.

The user interface is excellent with a button on the home to access Sun Learning. While in the application there are buttons to access new content, hot topics, specific categories, search and personal settings.

Additionally, Sun Learning has set up a web site for users to contribute their own content. Upon upload, the content is auromatically encoded and tagged.

For more information about Sun's Mobile Learning initiative, check out Charles Beckham's blog.

{youtube}bakgX_wLt4w{/youtube}